

title: any experience finding work using LinkedIn [Australia] + resume advice

num_comments: 1

num_up_votes: 1

upvote_ratio: 1.0

Post Text

So. Seek keeps brushing me off at selection criteria. And I have both paid and volunteer experience in IT . But lost my old LinkedIn profile and hence networking. Do you recon there is a chance of gettin' in touch with recruiters there ? Any tips on what to put in the LinkedIn? Like skills do I list as much as I can think of that can be relevant to the position(s) I'm after Also not very excited to share my number there . Or is it best to add it ? With the media adding is it worth applauding certifications there or will just listing be ok? I have gaps in education Due to health both times One got admitted inpatient (depression bad episodes) Another was burn out Or is it best not to mention the gaps? Same goes for resumes and withdrawn or intermitted due to health or to get sorted shit / get work experience etc? How much can I dance delicately around my health and burn outs breaks and is it worth if invited to the interview mentioning the health reasons (I had mentioned to the employer once didn't go well so I'm not very keen to sharing the mental health and neurodivergent status , but I got gaps which dont look great and education was extended due to health as well) I'm not saying I'm desperate and will take any IT job now but I'm atm not in the position to be overly picky Other experiences ideas etc are so very much welcome

Comments

Commenter_2

ID: REDACTED! ~(o.o)~ <3, Upvotes: 1

Why not try out an IT recruitment agency?